KENTUCKY STATE PUBLICATIONS COLLECTION

- A driver's manual for people planning to test for a driver's license...
- The final investigative report to the governor on the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire...
- A travel guide highlighting Kentucky's state parks...

What these publications have in common is that they are all state documents - official publications of Kentucky state agencies. And one of the best places to find these, and thousands of other State publications, is at the Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives.

Since 1958, KDLA has been the official state repository for over 45,000 Kentucky state agency publications dating from 1792 to present. These publications offer a rich source of information on the history of the Commonwealth.

1961—Nick Clooney interviews Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Emerson Beauchamp.

Locating State Publications at KDLA

- The KDLA Catalog is available at <http://kdla.kyvl.org>. The Catalog allows you to limit your search results to state government publications by selecting "State Government Publications" under "Filter Your Search."
- The Kentucky State Publications Database is available online at <http://kdla.ky.gov/employees/govpubs/Pages/KentuckyStatePublications.aspx>. This database has information on over 20,000 state publications from 1792 to 2005. You may search by title, agency, date, and subject. It will display information on the cabinet, agency, and title of the publication and KDLA's holdings, such as: format, availability, dates, and physical description (e.g. number of pages).

1964 - Martin Luther King Jr. leads Freedom March in Frankfort, Kentucky.

1937 - 1938 - Kentucky Packhorse Library workers in Hindman, Kentucky

- State Publications in print format are made available onsite through the Archives Research Room (<http://kdla.ky.gov/researchers/Pages/visitingthearchives.aspx>).
- Electronic state publications are available online through the e-Archives (<http://dspace.kdla.ky.gov:8080/jspui/>). It contains a limited selection of state records, including minutes of state-level boards, commissions and legislative committees as well as electronic state agency publications.
- KDLA's professional staff is available to assist you. Contact the Archives Research Room at 502-564-8300, ext. 346.
