

Good morning. I hope that all of you are doing well and staying safe.

In this week's digest you will find information about music programming, Digital Inclusion Week, book and workforce news, and grant and scholarship opportunities.

Please let me know if you have any questions about any of the items listed in this message or anything else related to adult services and workforce development. I will do my best to help you.

May you have a great day and week.

Programming

- The Dance Music Archive is a digital resource for everything related to dance music, and it launched in August 2021. This year is also the 40th anniversary of MTV, and the American Libraries' Call Number podcast had an episode on libraries and hip-hop. I know that some of your libraries have already had programming around MTV's anniversary or other music-related programming. If you need more ways to celebrate music and culture, here are some ideas.
 - Share about the Dance Music Archive and other music-related sites (like AllMusic) with your community members, and promote your library's materials about dance music, other music genres, and musicians from your community, Kentucky, and abroad.
 - The most recent issue of American Libraries has an article related to music-programming that may be useful as well, Stream On: Amplifying Local Sounds by Bill Furbee.
- Podcast about veterans and libraries: Serving our veterans American Libraries Call # podcast. The first half features an academic librarian who is also a U.S. Air Force veteran, and the second half of the podcast is with the library director of the Barr Memorial Library at Fort Knox, KY. The library director at Barr Memorial Library shares a few programming ideas during the podcast.
- I know some of you are participating in the 9/11 poster display. The latest American Libraries has articles related to 9/11 that you may want to highlight as well. Scroll down the page and click on "More Stories" to see the 9/11-related articles. One of the articles is Defenders of Patron Privacy: After challenging the Patriot Act, four librarians reflect on privacy in the digital age. The authors of the article talk with four public librarians who defended the privacy of patrons, something that you all continue to do today.
- Exploring Genealogy You may be able to adapt these programs, which are offered at the Springfield-Greene Co. Library in Missouri, for your library.
- As the holidays approach, consider offering programs about holiday spending on a budget or homemade gift options. Contact your local Cooperative Extension office for ideas or to have the extension agent present a virtual or in-library program.

- National Adult Education and Family Literacy Week will be held from September 19-25, and you can find ideas on how to participate in this week here. There is also an advocacy guide with links to other sites related to adult literacy and education.
 - For those of you who work with English Language Learners, here is a video tutorial about finding content in other languages on PBS LearningMedia.
- Digital Inclusion Week is October 4-8. Find resources on programming and how to promote digital inclusion at this site.

Health-related information

Mental health resources for library workers and patrons (National Library of Medicine, August 3)

There are several links at the site above, including links for disaster distress helpline, National Suicide Prevention Lifeline, and the Veteran's Crisis Line.

Building Community with Dementia Services webinar

As part of this year's Virtual ALA Conference, there was a program offered called Building Community with Dementia Services. Free access to this 51 minute webinar is available via this link.

The Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion (part of the U.S. Department for Health and Human Services) has a toolkit for the updated dietary guidelines. The toolkit is designed for health professionals, however there are fact sheets designed for the public within the kit. This is a free resource.

Workforce programming

Information Technology

-Share and promote any library materials related to computer science, coding, programming, network administration, smart phone apps, etc.

-If your library has a makerspace, host an open house or a 'get to know' your makerspace. This can be a virtual event. You can use this opportunity to explain the technology that is there and how your community members can use the equipment. The open house can be an avenue for encouraging your patrons to explore the makerspace and the possibilities that exist within the technology industry. The Madison County Public Library recently shared about their Maker Lab with The Berea Citizen.

-Ask if your IT Administrator is willing to be interviewed about their role and how they got into this career path. If you aren't able to interview your IT Administrator, see if there is another IT professional (Network Administrator at a local health care facility, Computer Science faculty member at your local high school or university, or a programmer who is working remotely) in your community or region who is willing to be virtually interviewed. Some of the questions can include: what training and/or education do you have, how did you get into this career, what do you like about the IT field, what tips would you share with someone who is interested in this field, what are some of the neat and/or unusual experiences you have had in this career?

Grants and Scholarships

The Institute of Museum and Library Services is now accepting FY 2022 proposals for National Leadership Grants for Libraries \(NLG-L\) and the Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian program \(LB21\).

Applicants have through September 24, 2021, to submit their two-page preliminary proposals.

The American Library Association announced the Let's Talk about It: Women's Suffrage grant. Applications will be accepted from September 1 to December 1, 2021. Library workers can apply online at ala.org/lta.

- Let's Talk About It (LTAI): Women's Suffrage is a reading and discussion project that will spark conversations across the United States about the women's suffrage movement.
- Led by libraries in their communities, participants will read a series of books, curated by humanities scholars, and discuss the people and events from this important part of U.S. history.
- Twenty-five libraries will be selected in 2022 to receive materials and funding to lead the first Let's Talk About It: Women's Suffrage discussions.
- LTAI: Women's Suffrage is a humanities discussion project supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities \(NEH\).

The American Library Association also announced that scholarships are available for those pursuing a graduate degree in library science.

Sincerely,
Hilary
