Research Opportunities in the State Archives: State Board of Health

By Tim Tingle
Public Records Branch Manager, KDLA

In 1878, the Kentucky General Assembly created the State Board of Health. The Board was authorized to oversee the "general supervision of the interests of the health and life of the citizens of this State," including investigating the causes of diseases and studying the "effects of localities, employment, conditions, food, water supply, habits, and circumstances on the health of the people." The Board was also empowered to issue

Exhibits Bring the Community into the Library

By Emily Irby
Community Relations Coordinator
Henderson County Public Library

For almost 20 years, the Henderson County Public Library has hosted various collections of art in its rotunda. Partnering with the Ohio Valley Art League (OVAL) and the Henderson Society of Art, the library sees a change in artwork every month to three months. And every change brings a different crowd through the doors to see it.

OVAL and the Henderson Society of Art will bring six exhibits to the library this year. An exhibit can be viewed all year, except during exhibit changes and during the month of January. Exhibits include photos from around the world, artwork done by both local and national talent, threadwork, silverpoint, sculptures and pottery. Read more...

Oral Histories of Coach Adolph Rupp, Bill Keightley, & Claude Sullivan

A large and enthusiastic audience gathered recently when the Clark County Public Library, with the Clark County University of Kentucky Alumni, hosted a program on the University of Kentucky Oral History Project.
Doug Boyd, Director of the Louie B. Nunn Center for Oral History at UK, spoke about efforts of the UK Archives to make materials accessible to the public.

The audience, made up of UK alumni and sports fans enjoyed the program and were especially interested in clips of sports videos and portions of oral history audio recordings of UK Basketball Coach Adolph Rupp, UK Equipment Manager Bill Keightley and others. They were even more excited about learning how such materials can be accessed online, for free.

Boyd spoke about developing a new audience for archive collections. He suggested that there are fascinating collections in the UK Archives that have never been viewed, because the public either does not know about them, or because it is inconvenient to visit. Boyd noted that one of the best ways of meeting the challenge of low interest and a declining audience for collections was to find ways to offer online access by digitizing the video and audio collections and mounting them on the Web. This is what is being done with many of the oral history interviews conducted with UK sports figures at the Louie B. Nunn Center.

By visiting the Kentucky Virtual Library site, the public is now able to access 12 different oral history projects, with many more scheduled to follow. The recordings are being mounted on the Kentuckiana Digital Library’s oral history collection, and they comprise a voluminous amount of material. The William B. Keightley Oral History Project alone contains over 40 hours of interviews. In addition to the interviews of sports figures Adolph Rupp and Keightley, there are such oral history projects as The American Civil Rights, conducted by Robert Penn Warren, The Horse Industry, the Harlen Hubbard interviews, the Colonel Arthur L. Kelly’s Military Veterans Oral History, and interviews with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Stanley F. Reed. As funds are generated for further projects, new material will be added to the web collections. The projects are expensive and those attending the program were encouraged to think about endowments and donations to the Big Blue Archives Project.

This librarian was most impressed by the fact that the Oral History Collection on the Kentuckiana page of the KYVL website has interactive features. Not only can the user initiate a keyword search of the transcript of each interview, but with a click on a numbered link in the left margin, one is taken to the audio portion where the keyword appears. That innovation was formatted by Boyd and his technicians at the Nunn Center. These kinds of ideas should be inspiring to all librarians who are in the process of making the transition to digital and online access to their collections.

Directions to access the Big Blue Archives Project:

Go to the KYVL page, http://www.kyvl.org/

*On that page, click on "Kentuckiana Digital Library"

*On the digital collection page, open the "Select Collection" drop-down menu in the header

*Choose "Oral History"; it is the last collection in the drop-down list

*On the Oral History page, you can search or scroll the page

*Once in the specific oral history project, you have the choice of searching or browsing by interview.

*In each interview, you get the transcript of the interview, which you can listen to or search for a particular keyword. The blue links in the left column are links to the sections.

Research Opportunities in the State Archives: State Board of Health

In 1878, the Kentucky General Assembly created the State Board of Health. The Board was authorized to oversee the "general supervision of the interests of the health and life of the citizens of this State," including investigating the causes of diseases and studying the "effects of localities, employment, conditions, food, water supply, habits, and circumstances on the health of the people." The Board was also empowered to issue recommendations for the prevention and treatment of disease.

An extensive collection of the annual reports, bulletins and minutes of the Board of Health is available at the State Archives. These materials contain a wide range of information on public health issues. The first annual report of the Board in 1878 includes a study of "The Contamination of the Water Supply as a Cause of Disease." The author recognized that pure water was necessary for public health, but that filtration systems available at the time were rudimentary and unreliable. He recommended that the water supply be protected from pollution, and that water should be boiled whenever contamination was a possibility. Although this may seem obvious to us now, these measures were relatively new at the time. Studies of a host of other public health problems were published over the years. The biennial report for 1910-1911 contains articles on "How to Prevent Smallpox" and the "Prevention of Hookworm." In the early 1930's several reports addressed the widespread prevalence of tuberculosis in Kentucky.

Public health issues which arose as a result of specific epidemics or disasters were also studied. The 1878 report includes an extensive and detailed review of the yellow fever epidemic at Hickman, Kentucky in that year. Hickman is located in western Kentucky on the Mississippi River. The causes of yellow fever were unknown at the time, and the author of the report suggested that a "miasma" may have been produced when the riverbanks caved in and exposed decaying vegetation. However, the report also thoroughly investigated the problem of sanitation in Hickman, and made some surprisingly modern recommendations for improvements in that area. Finally, the report contains a list of all 261 persons in Hickman who contracted the disease, giving the name, street address, age, date of death if pertinent, and remarks for each individual. In a similar manner, the Bulletin for August 1933 describes the strong tornado that tore through Tomkinsville in Monroe County, and the response of the public health authorities in the aftermath of that disaster in which 181 people were injured and 20 killed.

Finally, the Board of Health compiled and published statistics on many aspects of public health. The 1878 report lists numbers and causes of death in each month for each county. These causes include a number of diseases that are now much less common but were still very serious issues in the 19th century, including cholera, typhoid fever and dysentery. A few of the listings demonstrate some creativity on the part of the reporting physicians who may have been unable to assign an exact scientific cause, including "overtaxation of the brain," "nervous irritability," "pain in the knee," and "eating walnuts." Many counties also have entries for both "killed accidentally" and "killed intentionally."

The publications of the Board of Health provide a broad range of narrative and statistical information on a variety of health-related subjects. Researchers interested in the history of public health in Kentucky will find this collection to be an extremely valuable resource.
Exhibits Bring the Community into the Library

For almost 20 years, the Henderson County Public Library has hosted various collections of art in its rotunda. Partnering with the Ohio Valley Art League (OVAL) and the Henderson Society of Art, the library sees a change in artwork every month to three months. And every change brings a different crowd through the doors to see it.

OVAL and the Henderson Society of Art will bring six exhibits to the library this year. An exhibit can be viewed all year, except during exhibit changes and during the month of January. Exhibits include photos from around the world, artwork done by both local and national talent, threadwork, silverpoint, sculptures and pottery. In order to make the library more capable of displaying art, OVAL, with a special contribution from a private citizen, installed gallery lighting and wood rails to hang artwork from when they began using the library in 1991. Many times when a new exhibit goes up, OVAL will also sponsor a reception or lecture to accompany it.

With these ever changing exhibits, new eyes enter the library that otherwise would not have ventured through the front doors. When they walk into the upstairs gallery, not only are they pleased to see the artwork, but also they are surprised at the beauty of the renovated rotunda of the original Carnegie building. Along their way, visitors are able to catch a glimpse of patrons heartily working on their family's genealogy in the library's genealogy department.

The Henderson County Public Library does allow any local cultural group or artists to use library space for exhibits as long as they adhere to the library's exhibit policy and seek permission from the director and library board. During the month of March, the Rotunda gallery displayed artwork done by the physically and mentally challenged artists from the Hugh Edward Sandefur Training Center in Henderson. The gallery and exhibit space has been and continues to be a source of education for adults and children alike as well as a great way to bring community members into the library.

Splish Splashing into Fun with KDLA's New Thematic Kits

Whether you're near a lake, a river, a pond, a swimming pool, or just the bathtub, you'll want to Make a Splash - Read! at the 2010 Kentucky Summer Reading Program. Teens will Make Waves at Your Library during the Teen SRP, and adults can Water Your Mind - Read with the Adult SRP.

The State Library created five thematic kits that explore the world of water in response to public library staff suggestions submitted through focus group discussions and survey comments. Among the new thematic kits, you'll find (click on the link for full kit details):

* Water, Water Everywhere (Preschool Level)
* Oceans (Preschool Level)
* Waterways (Preschool Level)
* What to Do with Water (Teen Level)
* Using Water Wisely (Adult Level)
The preschool kits offer stories, songs, games and other activities about oceans, rivers, lakes, pools, and the creatures that live there. The teen and adult kits focus on water conservation and science experiments - and of course, lots of reading and fun! Public libraries interested in scheduling any of the water kits should make a request using the Visual Materials/Kit Request form on the KDLA website. Kits are delivered to the public libraries by the KYVL courier.

The State Library provides over 600 kits - thematic kits, interactive (youth) mystery kits, Text Express Youth Book Discussion Kits, Large Print (Adult) Book Discussion Kits - to help public libraries promote reading in children and adults and love for libraries. All kits are listed in the KDLA Catalog.

If you would like more information about any of the State Library kits or need assistance in scheduling a kit, contact the State Library reference desk at 502-564-8306 or 800-928-7000, ext. 342.

Lexington Public Library Receives Ralph Gabbard Television Excellence Award

The Lexington Public Library recently received the Ralph Gabbard Television Excellence Award and a Gold Addy from the Lexington Ad Club for a commercial promoting library cards.

The ad, which can be seen at YouTube, was written and directed by the library's video media specialist Thai Emmerich, with Library Cable Channel 20 coordinator Thom Southerland serving as director of photography. The library produced the ad for approximately $150.

As a recipient of the Gold Addy, the commercial automatically will be entered in the district Addy competition, which includes Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky.

This is the second time the library has received the Ralph Gabbard award.

The library also received a Silver Addy for Special Event Invitation to the Warwick Foundation's presentation by folklorist William Montell as part of the Central Library Gallery's exhibit, "The Warwick Foundation Presents: Tombstone Tales and Preservation." The library's graphic artist, Peggy McAllister, was the designer of the... invitation, and Warwick Foundation member Jim Birchfield was the photographer.

Kentucky Writers' Day

The Kentucky Arts Council (KAC) will host a Kentucky Writers' Day celebration beginning at 10:00 a.m. EDT on Friday, April 23, 2010, in the Capitol Rotunda in Frankfort. Kentucky Writers' Day celebrates the literary arts in the Commonwealth and honors Kentucky writers.

KAC seeks libraries' assistance in promoting Kentucky Writers' Day and the literary arts. A flyer about the event will be mailed to each Kentucky public library and KAC asks that you post the flyer in a prominent place. Even if your patrons can't attend, the flyer will help build public awareness about the Kentucky Poet Laureate Program and Kentucky's rich literary heritage.

In addition, please consider hosting a local Kentucky Writers' Day event to showcase Kentucky's literary arts. Hosting a writing workshop, public readings by local writers or a read-a-thon of Kentucky books actively invites participation from the community. Book displays, bulletin boards and presentations on Kentucky authors inform and draw attention to Kentucky writers.

The arts council's Kentucky Writers' Day event features readings by Kentucky Poet Laureate Gurney Norman and past Poets Laureate Jane Gentry Vance, Sena Jeter Naslund, Joe Survant and Richard Taylor. The celebration also includes recitations by the first and second place winners of the state poetry Out Loud National Recitation Contest, Barbara Gooding of Western Hills High School in Frankfort and Torie DiMartile of Beechwood High School in Ft. Mitchell. The event is free and open to the public.

A reception honoring all Kentucky writers will follow on the mezzanine level of the Capitol and will include a book signing by the past Poets Laureate of "Abraham Lincoln of Kentucky" and "Five Kentucky Poets Laureate: An Anthology," both publications of KAC. Proceeds from book sales support the literary arts in the Commonwealth.

The Kentucky General Assembly established Kentucky Writers' Day in 1990 to honor Kentucky's strong literary tradition and to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Kentucky native Robert Penn Warren, the first poet laureate of the United States and winner of three Pulitzer prizes.

The Kentucky Arts Council, the state arts agency, creates opportunities for Kentuckians to value, participate in and benefit from the arts. KAC funding is provided by the Kentucky General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Job Fair Popular Event at Campbell County Public Library

More than 300 people attended the first job fair in March at the Cold Spring Branch of the Campbell County Public Library. Two other job fairs are planned for April and May at the other branches in the system.
Sponsored by One Stop Northern Kentucky, a division of the Kentucky Office of Employment and Training, the event attracts job seekers from teens to senior citizens. The job fairs each last for three hours and feature about 15 employers.

"We frequently offer programs on resume writing and interview techniques, so the job fair is a natural extension to help people find employment," said library director JC Morgan. "This type of program is another example of how libraries add value to the communities we serve."

Participants were encouraged to bring copies of their resumes and be prepared to complete employment applications on site. Employers are mostly from manufacturing and service industries. Participating companies at the event included FedEx, L'Oreal, AFLAC, Speedway/Super America, Dollar General and Gateway Community College.

According to Kenneth Wocher, local veteran's employment representative of One Stop Northern Kentucky, several companies at the fair have vacancies that need to be filled. On average, 10% of the people who attend One Stop Job Fairs are hired after the event. The mission of One Stop Northern Kentucky is to provide user-friendly access to integrated employment, training and support services.

"We see the job fairs as an opportunity to help people find employment, and at the same time, we are bringing people into our branches who may not have visited a library recently. There are just so many new services available through libraries now. Job fairs are worthwhile events, for both the public and the library," said Morgan.

Evenings Upstairs @ Your Library - Entertain, Enlighten, Educate and Involve

Since 1994 McCracken County Public Library has offered adult programs to our region. The Evenings Upstairs @ Your Library programs are held monthly and are free of charge and open to the public. Programs last an hour with lively Q&A following the presentations.

Evenings Upstairs involves author events, poetry readings, Chautauqua performances, lectures, or talks led by scholars, local "experts", and noted authors. They cover a wide range of topics from antiques & collectibles, forensics, vampires, historical figures and Jewish traditions. Kentucky and local history rank as the favorite topic among attendees. The library has hosted acclaimed Kentucky authors such as the late Dr. Thomas Clark, who made several appearances as well as Bobbie Ann Mason, David Dick, Lynwood Montell, John Kleber, Joe Survant and many others. The library also recognizes and supports regional and local authors. Writers such as former Kentucky Poet Laureate Sena Jeter Naslund have shared their craft and the audience was able to disseminate and interpret her readings.

The Evenings Upstairs series has established a strong base of regular attendees along with guests who are drawn to particular topics or speakers. Recent crowd favorites were renowned Lincoln impersonator Jim Sayre who thrilled a large audience with his historical drama highlighting Lincoln's Commonwealth connections and legacy. Mom Feather Erickson, a Cherokee elder at the Mantle Rock Native American Center, challenged the assembly with her thought provoking discussion of the Trail of Tears.
The programs are videotaped and are aired on educational Comcast Cable Channel 7, MCLIB TV. The cable programs reach 1000s of viewers from the region. The adult programs receive support from the Friends of the Library, Kentucky Humanities Council and other community sponsors. The library has benefited from successful partnerships with national Civil War battlefields, museums, universities, banks, government agencies, businesses and non-profit organizations. Collaboration has made the programming more meaningful by allowing the partners to share ideas, resources, audiences and promotions often opening doors for future endeavors. In April the library will join with the National Quilt Museum to provide a detailed seminar on the care and documentation of family quilts with collections curator Judy Schwinger.

Programming has increased our library's visibility and has acquainted non-users with library materials and services. Since 2001, an estimated 4000 persons have attended an Evenings Upstairs @ Your Library program. It has taken time, trial and error and patience to build an audience but the reward has been great. The library has reached a better understanding of our community and its needs while our community appreciates a unique, valuable library service.

University of Louisville Librarian Recognized

University of Louisville librarian James Manasco is one of five leading information professionals who have been named as the 2010 Class of Special Libraries Association (SLA) Fellows.

Fellowship in SLA is bestowed on no more than five mid-career professionals annually in recognition of past, present and future service to the association and the profession. The 2010 Fellows will be recognized during the SLA Awards Ceremony and participate in a session and panel discussion alongside the 2010 SLA Rising Star award recipients at the SLA 2010 Annual Conference & INFO-Expo in New Orleans.

"The SLA Fellows are a group of professionals of unrivaled intelligence and dedication, and I am confident that each of these individuals will continue to be an important asset to this organization and the profession," said SLA President Anne Caputo. "I congratulate and thank them for their service to SLA thus far, and look forward to seeing what they do with their talent and drive as they move into the next leg of their SLA journey."

Mansaco joined SLA in 1994 and is a member of the Kentucky Chapter and the Science-Technology, Information Technology (IT), and Academic Divisions. He is head of Collection Development for the University of Louisville.

He has served in a variety of SLA leadership roles, including chair of the Sci-Tech (2003-2004) and IT Divisions (2008), president of the Kentucky Chapter (2003-2004), and chair of the 2010 Annual Conference Advisory Council. He is a co-presenter of the popular Sci-Eng 101 series of programs offered at SLA's Annual conference each year and is the editor of the Sci-Tech News, the multi-divisional bulletin that covers several of SLA's science-related units. The Kentucky Chapter honored him with its Professional Award in 2004 and its Outstanding Member Award in 2007.
Prior to arriving at the University of Louisville, Manasco was head of the Robert E. Shaver Library of Engineering of the University of Kentucky (1999-2003). He received his MSLS and his bachelor's degree from the University of Kentucky.
