How Rude! The Price of Incivility in the Workplace (Colorado State Library)

The effects of incivility can lead to a loss in staff creativity, deterioration in team spirit and may result in patrons turning away from the library. Come learn tactics staff can use to minimize the effects of rudeness on performance and well-being and strategies managers can use to keep their own behavior in check and to foster civility in others.

OF-BY-FOR ALL: Co-Creating Programs and Developing Community Partnerships to Serve People with Disabilities in Libraries (Infopeople)

It doesn't matter if your library is small or large, public or academic, rural or urban—all libraries serve people with disabilities. However, people with disabilities experience barriers to equitable access to libraries and are not always visible, participatory members of their library communities. In this interactive webinar, you will learn how you can be an advocate for people with disabilities and break down barriers to library access.

Smart Planning for the Post-COVID Library (EveryLibrary)

The COVID pandemic altered both library operations and personal habits during the crisis and some of those changes will continue going forward. Many of the lessons learned and new approaches that were forced upon us help to inform new approaches to service and reinforce the need for adaptable plans and methodologies.

PROGRAM ABSTRACTS & LOGIN INFORMATION:

Monday, Nov 1 (12-1 pm)

Organizing 101 (Nonprofit Learning Lab)

Organizing means bringing people together to build power. Whether your mission is changing lives, changing minds or changing laws, every organization is stronger when all stakeholders work together. In this session, we'll talk about organizing as a tool for transformation. We'll also talk about the differences and similarities between organizing and mobilizing and when to do each. In addition, we'll review important steps in building an effective organizing campaign.

For more information and to register, visit: <https://www.nonprofitlearninglab.org/webinars>

Monday, Nov 1 (2-3 pm)

Digging Deeper into Local and Family History with Census Data (Public Library Association)

The Census is an essential source for discovering and reconstructing local and family history. Rich data about communities, neighborhoods, and families document local demographics, immigration and naturalization information, ancestral family names, relationships, birth years, and birthplaces. Discover public library programming and strategies to engage your community in a deeper understanding of local and family history.

Tuesday, Nov 2 (1-1:45 pm)

Cryptocurrency Donations: What's driving this trend and how do I get started? (CharityHowTo)

Believe it or not, mission-driven organizations like Save the Children and American Cancer Society are leading the way in the mainstream adoption of cryptocurrencies. These charities, and hundreds more, integrated crypto into their operations several years before companies like Visa and PayPal. It's the start of a new era for fundraising, and all nonprofit organizations—big or small, old or new—should understand the factors that influence the decision of whether to start accepting crypto donations. By the end of this webinar, you will understand crypto donor demographics, what motivates them to give to charities, and the steps your nonprofit can take to fundraise crypto effectively.

Employing Community Wellness Liaisons to Create More Inclusive Public Libraries (NNLM Region 3)

Lack of access to reliable health information contributes to pervasive racial and ethnic health disparities. Individuals from diverse communities are often unaware of library services and/or do not feel welcome in their local libraries, resulting in underuse. Consequently, there is a need for libraries to learn and implement methods that successfully connect them to diverse communities in order to increase equity in access and use of health information resources.
