In a world where films regularly take weeks, months and, at times, even years to create, Jakob Bilinski's latest short film Lucky was shot in eight hours.

A man with short dark hair and a mustache, wearing a white button-down shirt over a grey t-shirt, is shown in a medium shot. He is looking slightly to his left. The background is a library or office with bookshelves filled with books. A framed picture hangs on the wall behind him. A red banner with white text is overlaid on the bottom left of the image. A small logo is visible in the bottom right corner.

HALLOWEEN
ISSUE

MENU: A DISTASTEFUL DISH AND SOME SEASONAL FARE

Online harassment of women is a pernicious and serious issue. While perhaps simplifying things, women are essentially harassed for one of two perceptions: that they're a challenge to male dominance or that their sexuality is a commodity to be possessed.

The Gamergate fiasco last year is an egregious example of the former. Prominent women critical of the misogyny inherent in video games and the industry were subjected to an anonymous and coordinated campaign to silence them through threats of rape and murder.

Similarly, "creeping" is a term that describes cyber-stalking women through their social media activity. Matthew Gunnoe chose to address this in his 2012 film Creeper, released last month on DVD by Uearthed Films. In it, Erica (Monica Chambers) and Cally (Rohnja Morrow) are tired of being harassed the hackneyed depiction of women in horror films though, it's a missed opportunity.

So let's move on to something more fun that arrives just in time for Halloween, the resoundingly fun

The longest of the bunch is Thomas Milliner's deadly serious Encyclopedia Satanica, in which a librarian who is guilt-ridden after her ex-boyfriend's suicide finds an old book of arcane spells and rituals
